Moderate, accurate flak encountered at target. Aircraft #43-30795 blew up. No witness noticed it in distress before this. One witness, however, noticed a yellowish color on the right wing just before the explosion. The explosion was seen as "one big sheet of flame" and "one big ball of fire." The Aircraft disintegrated and disappeared immediately in smoke. No parts or pieces were seen. No parachute was seen. Cause of explosion is unknown. It occured about ½ to 1 minute after bombs away, as squadron was turning off target. One witness thought four of the aircraft's M-65 1,000 lb GP bombs hung up and were in the aircraft when it exploded. Another witness thought aircraft was hit by several bombs falling from another aircraft. Whatever the cause, all witnesses agree that the aircraft exploded and disintegrated and that they saw no chutes.

22 January 1945 — 748th Squadron — Sterkrade, Germany

Aircraft #43-38583 was apparently hit by flak; opinion differs as to just where. One witness believes between top turret and cockpit. Pilot of A/C 749, flying on A/C 583's wing, believes A/C 583 was hit in vertical stabilizer and that pieces of A/C 583 struck A/C 749's windshield. Aircraft then dropped down out of formation, but no damage was seen. Aircraft was not out of control. When it dropped out of formation, it went down in a dive of 40 to 70 degrees for 1,000 to 3,000 feet and then appeared to level off under control. A minute, more or less, later it was lost sight of. One witness believes the aircraft had its wheels down when last seen. No parachute was seen. There was confusion on the bomb-run and afterwards. Part of the low squadron including A/C 583 bombed on smoke markers of the lead squadron and separated from the rest of the low squadron after bombs away. The confusion caused by this and by the accurate flak results in a lack of adequate observations of what happened to A/C 583.

Meagre to moderate, fairly accurate flak encountered at target, about five or six minutes before A/C #42-97164 left formation. None encountered at time when A/C 164 left formation. No enemy aircraft encountered by the Group at any time. Number two or number three engine was feathered. No fire or smoke was seen. No other sign of damage was seen. Aircraft was not out of control. No parachute was seen.

OPERATIONAL NARRATIVE

Mission #146 MERSEBURG 8 November 1944

Although three squadrons were dispatched today to attack the synthetic oil plant at Merseburg, difficulty in assembling caused the group to be recalled. Taking off at 0700 hours the group leader first started to assemble at briefed altitude, but upon recommendation from Newflick 3 he decided to assemble at briefed altitude plus 2,000 feet. Several attempts at various altitudes proved useless. With four A/C in formation and weather conditions unfavorable for assembly, it was decided to proceed to Control Point #1 where it was believed the weather would improve.

The four A/C arrived at Control Point #1 on time and on course. On the Division Assembly Line, the Group Leader was in proper position but "S'd" on course in order to allow the other A/C to join him; however they were never able to do so. It was the belief of the Group Leader that the other two squadrons were behind the formation according to their given position reports. Upon reaching Control Point #2, the four A/C, knowing the other A/C to be behind them, executed two 360 degree turns in an attempt to accomplish an assembly. These efforts were of no avail and the Group Leader contacted the Wing Leader to inform him of the situation. The Group Leader was then advised to recall his group and proceed to base unless any squadron could tack on to another group.

The low squadron, having a full complement of A/C, went across the border of Germany in a futile attempt to bomb with another group. They then returned to base. Other A/C in the group had already proceeded to base.

At 1142 hours at 18,000 feet over the Channel, A/C 42-38064 and A/C 44-8418 collided in thick haze. A/C 064 broke in two and went down with all of the crew lost.

Mission #147 METZ AREA 9 November 1944

With the group's attack on this tactical target today, there began a new series of missions by the Eighth Air Force designed to give direct support to our ground forces along the front lines.

Our target was #5 in the Metz Area - enemy gun positions. With Major Spencer in the lead ship, the group took off to assemble at 15,500 feet on the Glatton Buncher. Being late leaving the Buncher, the Group had to cut off Crowland and Downham Market on the route over England in order to gain time. Division Assembly, however, was properly executed and the course over the Channel and continent proceeded smoothly.

Approximately 15 minutes' time was lost between Control Points #1 and #2, because winds were not as briefed. The I.P. was reached about 18 miles southeast of briefed. Bombing was done in Group formation by means of Gee-H equipment. Cloud coverage in the target area was 8 to 10/10. Two many groups were on the bomb run at the same time, and a considerable amount of caution had to be exercised to avoid collisions. 17 A/C were equipped to receive SCS.51 localizer and the results were generally good.

The 1000 lb GP's were dropped at 0955 hours from 23,000 feet, but they fell about 7-3/4 miles southeast of the assigned MPI.

The return route was flown as briefed except for the altitude which was maintained longer due to clouds. A normal let-down was made and all A/C returned to base without further incident. Only meagre, inaccurate flak had been encountered near Metz.

Mission #148 ESCHWEILER 16 November 1944

This was the group's second mission in the new tactical air offensive designed to carry out direct support of our ground troops near Aachen. The target for this day was troop concentrations and gun emplacements at Eschweiler.

Carrying 30X100 lb fragmentation bombs, the planes took off at 0815 to assemble at 15,000 feet. Because of a double drift previously executed the formation was two minutes late reaching Control Point #1. Division Assembly line was flown as briefed, but over the Channel it was necessary to execute another double drift to allow the remaining groups in the formation to catch up.

The route to the target was flown on course, and the time first lost because of the double drifts was made up before the group reached the target. Cloud coverage was 10/10 over the target and the Deputy A/C (a Gee-H ship) took over at about 0400Z.

The I.P. was crossed on course. SCS-51 functioned for the lead A/C but not for the deputy. The line of friendly flak was observed although the color was indistinct. No enemy flak was encountered. At 1142 hours the bombs were released from 22,000 feet. Clouds obscured the results of the attack.

The route from the target was flown a little ahead of schedule because winds were other than briefed. Over the Channel the Group deviated north to pick out openings in the clouds. A normal let-down was made and the majority of the formation returned to base at 1412. Ten A/C landed away.

Mission #149 FRIEDBERG 21 November 1944

Although Merseburg was the briefed target for today, unfavorable weather conditions caused the group to abandon the original plan and attack a target of opportunity. Major Syptak, air commander of the 94th Wing, led the group off to assemble at 10,000 feet. The route over England was flown as briefed except that the Group had to "S" on course because it was ahead of schedule. Division Assemble was particularly loose, but the Group assumed its approximate position.

At the Dutch Coast a significant amount of flak made it necessary for the preceding groups to "S" on course. Since the 94th "A" continued on its briefed course it got in front of its briefed position, becoming fourth instead of seventh.

The course over enemy territory was flown approximately as briefed. Almost ten minutes before the I.P. the group encountered cloud conditions extending up to 30,000 feet. The group leader decided to get below the clouds. At about 21,000 feet a group of B-17's coming from about 45 degrees "shuffled the deck".

The leader believed that all his A/C were now separated. The PFF equipment on his A/C was not functioning satisfactorily and the operator said that it would be difficult to make the briefed run. It was then decided to reassemble. The low squadron was not too far distant and assembled successfully, but the high squadron, being separated, continued on its course toward the target. Although the primary target area was visible, weather conditions at altitude were extremely bad, and it was impossible to perform a normal sighting. The 500 lb GP's were released at 1220 hours at the D.R. position - 5048N - 1050E.

In the meantime, the other two squadrons began a search for a target of opportunity and deviated considerably from the briefed course. The PFF equipment on the lead A/C was now completely inoperative and the lead was turned over to the deputy. Bombs were released on Friedberg, making an indistinguishable pattern 2,000 feet east of the marshalling yard located there.

The flight from the target was flown as near as possible to the briefed route. The lead and low squadrons with 2 A/C from Polebrook began a normal let-down over the Channel and returned to base without further incident. The high squadron returned to base separately.

Although flak had been encountered at the target, it was meagre and inaccurate and no aircraft were lost to it. At 2,500 feet over Cromer, flak was encountered, but it was off to the right.

Mission #150 GELSENKIRCHEN 23 November 1944

The synthetic oil plant at Gelsenkirchen was attacked today by the 457th. Taking off at 1123 hours with Capt. Dozier as air commander the group assembled at briefed altitude plus 4,000 feet because of clouds.

Because of time lost on assembly, the formation arrived at Control Point #1 four minutes late, but it assumed its proper position at the Division Assembly Line. The route to the I.P. was flown as briefed except for the difference in time. About eight minutes before the I.P. the lead was taken over by the Deputy.

Cloud coverage over the primary target was 10/10. Consequently it was decided to bomb by Gee-H. At this point the lead squadron was flying at 25,900 feet. Since this was the only squadron with operative Gee-H equipment, the twenty 250 lb GP's were dropped in Group formation at 1444½ hours. There was no great disturbance from the meagre flak thrown up by the Germans over the target.

The return route was flown approximately as briefed, although dense, persistent contrails made slight deviations in course necessary. In the vicinity of Amsterdam the formation was forced to take up extensive evasive action in order to avoid flak.

A normal let-down was begun over the North Sea and the group landed at 1715 hours.

Mission #151 MERSEBURG 25 November 1944

With 10/10 clouds existing over the target, the 457th today attacked the great synthetic oil plant at Merseburg-Leuna by H2X.

After accomplishing assembly, the group (with Major Stann leading) assumed its proper position in the Division formation. Control Point #1 was reached two minutes early.

The route to the target was flown as briefed, but the group continued to gain time because winds were not as briefed. At the I.P. the decision was made to bomb by PFF. The bombing was done in group formation with all three squadrons releasing their 500 lb GP's on the smoke marker of the lead A/C. The target was attacked at 1206 hours from 25,300 feet.

Although heavy clouds prevented complete assessment, results were probably not good. Bombs observed by crews over target fell from 1½ to 8 miles away from the target to the NW, N and E. Only damage probable is from a few strikes in the edge of Merseburg and a small village.

Course from the target was flown approximately as briefed except for slight deviations in order to stay in Division formation. Over Belgium the group deviated to the left of course in order to avoid clouds. The formation let down through the openings in the clouds over the Channel and landed at base without further incident.

Lt. Wescott, flying A/C #42-31633 left the formation after the target due to lack of oxygen. Damage caused by flak over Dunkirk caused him to crash land his ship near Marck, France. The whole crew subsequently returned to base.

Mission #152 MISBURG 26 November 1944

The natural oil refinery at Misburg was the target for the 457th today. Although last hit by the 2nd Division on 4 November, it had been left completely undamaged.

Taking off at 0815 hours, the group assembly was carried out at 10,000 feet over the Glatton Buncher as briefed. The Division Assembly was carried out without difficulty and the formation proceeded to the target area.

The route to the I.P. was flown as briefed, except that the formation was two minutes late. Some difficulty was encountered over enemy territory when it became necessary for the Group to "S" on course in order to stay in proper position behind the preceding group. They overshot the I.P., following in trail of the groups ahead.

The bomb run was combined PFF and visual. The target area was visible from the I.P., but the MPI was obscured by both clouds and smoke. At 1217 hours the bombs were dropped, the lead aircraft performing the sighting operation. The run was made on APCE, and although the flak was moderate to intense and fairly accurate, not much difficulty was encountered on the run. Results were unobserved.

After bombing, the Group deviated to the left of course in an attempt to rally with the Division. Rally was accomplished after a short interval and the remainder of the return route was flown at approximately as briefed until reaching the North Sea when it became necessary for the Group to deviate to the right of course in order to avoid clouds.

A normal let-down was made, and the group landed at 1447 hours.

Mission #153 MISBURG 29 November 1944

This was the group's second successive attack on the natural oil refinery at Misburg, but again the bombing results were unobserved due to 10/10 clouds over the target. One regular group of 36 aircraft was dispatched plus a screening force referred to as "D" Squadron.

With Lt. Col. Francis in the lead the group took off at 0850 hours. After affecting the assembly, the formation proceeded to the continent. At the Dutch coast a three-gun battery threw up some meagre but inaccurate flak. From the coast the group flew east to a point between Bremen and Osnabruck, where it headed southeast into the I.P. From there a ninety degree turn to the left brought the formation on the bomb run.

At 5237N-0730E the decision had been made to bomb by means of PFF equipment which functioned satisfactorily. At the I.P. the group swung wide to keep in Division formation. The squadrons bombed in group formation on group leaders, and the 500 lb GP's were released at 1255 hours from 26,200 feet for the lead squadron. Not much interference was encountered from the meagre, inaccurate flak thrown up by Jerry over the target area. Again the strike photos shows nothing but clouds.

The lead aircraft did not use PFF equipment, but bombed by dead reckoning instead.

Fighter support was excellent throughout the mission, and with no other opposition on the return route than the light flak at the Dutch coast, the planes returned to the base at 1630 hours.

Mission #154 BOHLEN 30 November 1944

Oil was again subjected to attacks by most of the Eighth Air Force today with the synthetic oil plantat Bohlen as the primary target of the 457th. Colonel Rogner was air commander and led the take off at 0930 hours. Assembly was carried out at 8,000 feet on the Glatton Buncher as briefed. The route over England was flown on time and course.

After Division assembly, the formation flew the route over the continent approximately as briefed, although they were about three minutes late because winds were not as briefed.

The turn on the I.P. was made about five miles south of briefed course. On the first run the Group was unable to locate the target because of haze and smoke. The Group Leader then decided to make a second run on the target and brought the formation around to the I.P. again. Because of mechanical difficulties incurred as the result of enemy action, the lead was turned over to the Deputy. The second run on the target was in process when about 3/4 of the way down the bomb run some interference was encountered from an unidentified group which was flying in a southeasterly direction toward the 457th, finally cutting in front of the formation. This other group then made a 180 degree turn, forcing the 457th off the bomb run into a left turn in order to avoid a collision. The high squadron became separated from the lead and low and continued on the bomb run to bomb the primary target visually. The sighting operation was hindered by a smoke screen, and the 250 lb GP's were dropped about five miles southwest of Bohlen.

The lead and low squadrons, after turning off the bomb run, turned left again in search of a target of opportunity. At 1348 hours the bombs were released on the town of Gotha, the bombs falling in the northeastern residential section of town.

In the vicinity of Fulda the two squadrons rejoined the Division and flew the remainder of the route back without further incident.

Two aircraft, 42-107026 and 42-31505, piloted by 1st Lt. White and 2nd Lt. Frechette, respectively, were lost to intense, accurate flak over the area roughly at 5110N-1210E.

Mission #155 KASSEL 4 December 1944

Last attacked by the 8th Air Force on 18 October and considerably damaged, the marshalling yards at Kassel were again the target for today. The other two divisions were also attacking rail centers.

[redacted]

Captain Doherty led the group and the ships took off at 0827 hours to assemble over the Glatton Buncher at 11,000 feet as briefed. At the Division Assembly Line the Group gradually began to fall behind because the Division formation was at 19,000 feet instead of 16,000 feet as briefed.

When it became apparent that it was physical impossibility to catch the formation, the Group Leader called for fighters to escort the Group to the target. The course was flown approximately as briefed but the formation lost about seven minutes from Control Point #1 to the last turn before the I.P., because winds were not as briefed. The 457th succeeded in joining the Division formation between the second and third group a few minutes before the I.P. was reached.

The I.P. was crossed on course, and as cloud coverage was 10/10, it became necessary to make a PFF run on the target. Bombing was done in Group formation with the lead A/C performing the sighting operation. Meagre, inaccurate flak caused no interference on the bomb run, and the ten 500 lb GP's and two M-17 IB's were dropped at 1225½ at 25,000 feet. Although photos showed the ground to be obscured by clouds, analysis of the position of the aircraft after bombs away with relationship to the ground as seen through a hole in the undercast, shows that built up areas were definitely hit.

After bombs away, the Group continued on the route back in Division formation. About thirty minutes before reaching the Belgium coast, word was received through cycle relay to proceed direct to base because of darkness. This forced the Group to deviate to the right of course. A normal let-down was made, and the group landed at the base at 1637 hours. All crews returned safely.

Mission #156 MERSEBURG 6 December 1944

Synthetic oil was the target for today as the town of Merseburg was again subjected to aerial attack from our planes. Major Spencer was air commander as the group took off to assemble over Kings Cliff at 9,500 feet as briefed. The route over England was flown as briefed and the Division Assembly Line was flown on course at proper altitude.

The route over enemy territory until just before the I.P. was flown approximately as briefed. About five minutes before the I.P., the lead squadron deviated about four miles to the right of course and the high and low squadrons became separated from it. After having become separated, the high and low squadrons executed a 360 degree turn in search of the lead, but were unable to locate it.

The lead squadron made a PFF run on the target because of solid cloud coverage. The C-1 functioned satisfactorily and no difficulties were encountered. The lead A/C of the high squadron performed the sighting operation for both the high and low squadrons on their run on the PFF target, their bombs going at 1202½.

The lead squadron tacked on to Deenethorpe; the high and low squadrons flew back together. Approximate course was flown as briefed with the exception of difference in time. A normal let-down was made and the Group returned to base without further incident.

Although anti-aircraft fire was intense over the target, the cloud coverage prevented the planes from being visual targets and the fire was inaccurate. None of our planes were lost.

Mission #157 STUTTGART-BOBLINGEN A/F 9 December 1944

The primary visual and Gee-H target for the group today was the Stuttgart-Boblingen airfield, considerably damaged by 100 bombers of the Eighth Air Force on 13 September 1944. Major Snow led the group as it took off for the assault at 0800 hours.

After assembly at 10,500 feet, Division Assembly was accomplished with the Group assuming its proper position. The course over the continent was flown approximately as briefed, except that the Group had to climb above briefed altitude because of contrails, and because of this the formation was behind schedule.

The I.P. was reached on course, but bombing was not done in proper order because the Gee-H equipment on the A/C in the lead and high squadrons was not functioning satisfactorily. The low squadron preceded the lead squadron, and the high squadron followed in trail. The low squadron bombed by Gee-H equipment. Cloud coverage was 7-10/10 and the MPI was not identified. The main concentration of the thirty-eight 100 lb GP's carried by each plane fell in fields between the northwestern edge of the airfield and the now destroyed Sindelfingen Daimler-Benz motor works. There were about ten scattered hits on the landing ground itself.

The lead squadron had contemplated bombing on the smoke markers of the low leader, but about thirty seconds before the BRL, the general target area opened up enough to permit a visual assist. The MPI was not identified and triangulation had to be used. At 1227 hours the bombs were released covering the southwestern end of the landing ground in open fields in the vicinity.

The high squadron was going to drop on the smoke markers of the lead squadron, but the interval between the two squadrons was too large and the high squadron was never able to catch up. They made a PFF run with a visual assist. Although no bursts appear in the high squadron photos, comparison of their bomb release points and tracks of the falling bombs with those of the other two squadrons show them to have obtained better results. A manual run was necessary, since the C-1 was inoperative.

After turning off the target, the Group was not able to rejoin the Division formation immediately, but deviated to the right of course to avoid a cloud bank. Upon nearing the coast, permission was requested from the Division Ground Station to enter the coast at Clacton instead of Cromer, because the formation was low on gasoline as a result of flying above briefed altitude. This accomplished, a normal let-down was made and the Group landed at 1600 hours. No anti-aircraft fire was encountered on the mission and all crews returned safely.

Mission #158 FRANKFURT 11 December 1944

Striking again at rail facilities supplying the German armies in the West, the 457th today attacked the marshalling yards at Frankfurt. Carrying twelve 500 lb GP's the Group took off to assemble on the Glatton Buncher at briefed altitude plus 3,000 feet because of clouds.

The route over England was flown above briefed altitude until the vicinity of Point "D", which was cut off because of weather. While flying over enemy territory, the Group had to make slight deviations in order to remain in Division formation. The Group was about eight minutes early, because winds were not as briefed.

At the I.P. the Group was a little to the right of course, but a successful run was made. Complete overcast existed over the target area, and it was necessary to bomb in group formation by means of PFF equipment. No flak was encountered and the bombs were released at 1122 hours from 25,000 feet for the lead squadron.

The turn off the target was left of course. Because of weather conditions, some difficulty was encountered in attempting Division rally. Control Point #3 was reached on course, but shortly after this, permission was granted by the Division Leader to deviate to the right of course because of the weather. The Group then flew in a northwestern direction, crossing over the route into the target, and headed for the briefed point of entry into England, viz., Cromer.

A normal let-down was made and the Group landed with no losses.

Mission #159 MERSEBURG 12 December 1944

The briefed secondary PFF target, the synthetic oil plant at Merseburg, was attacked by the Group today with a loss of one aircraft due to unknown causes. With Major Stann as air commander the Group took off to assemble at 11,500 feet on the Glatton Buncher.

The route over England was flown approximately as briefed with Point "E" cut off a little short of course to avoid clouds. At the Division Assembly the Group assumed its proper position.

Enroute to the I.P., the Group was about ten to fifteen miles north of course. This was necessary in order to remain in proper position in the Division formation. About seven minutes' time was gained before reaching the I.P., because winds were not as briefed. Just before the Group's arrival at the I.P., the lead was turned over to the deputy, because the PFF equipment of the lead aircraft was not functioning properly.

The I.P. was not crossed as briefed, because the Group was forced out to the left of course by preceding groups. On one occasion they attempted to come back on course on the bomb run but were not successful. The formation again swung out wide to the left in order to gain sufficient interval behind "Swordfish Charlie" and, consequently, came back on course to the target on a different heading than briefed. Cloud coverage was 10/10, and it was necessary to bomb in group formation by PFF equipment. The lead squadron released its 500 lb GP's at 1147 hours from 26,200 feet.

After bombs away, it was impractical to follow the briefed course because of the nature of the bomb run, which made it necessary to go right of the briefed course. Upon its entry into England at Cromer, the Group planned an instrument let-down, but weather conditions improved sufficiently in order to permit a normal let-down and land at base without further incident.

The one A/C lost was piloted by Lt. Higgins of the 750th Bomb Squadron.

Mission #160 KASSEL 15 December 1944

Very little flak and no fighter opposition were encountered today as the Group rained 500 lb bombs on the marshalling yards of the town of Kassel in a continuing effort to disrupt Germany's transportation system.

After assembling at 11,500 feet the Group left March to climb to approximately 2,500 feet above briefed altitude because of weather conditions. As a result of the additional climbing, the Group arrived at Control Point #1 about three minutes late and ten miles right of course. Division Assembly Line was not flown as briefed, but the Group was in proper position behind Polebrook. Because of poor visibility at the Dutch coast, the low squadron fell a short distance behind the formation and was unable to see the other two squadrons. Course to the target was flown approximately as briefed, except that the Group was a little above briefed altitude in order to avoid weather conditions.

The I.P. was reached on time, about five miles left of course. Bombing was done in Group formation by means of PFF equipment. Dense contrails hindered visibility and made it difficult to identify the lead squadron. The low squadron, having dropped a short distance behind the lead, released its bombs a minute later (1209 hours) than the other two squadrons. Altitude over the target was 27,500 feet. Cloud tops were estimated at approximately 30,000 feet, and the results of the bombing were unobserved.

Course from the target was flown approximately as briefed, except for slight deviations in order to remain behind the preceding group. The Group entered the English coast at Felixstowe, made an instrument let-down on the Glatton Buncher and landed without losses. Fighter escort was excellent throughout the mission.

PLACE AND TIME: Officers' Club - 1915 hours
Aero Club - 2015 hours

Sunday afternoon was Date Afternoon at the Aero Club. Tea was served from 1500 to 1700 hours to the personnel and their guests.

The USO Show "Band Wagon" appeared at the Aero Club on 30 January. Five girls presented the show.

The Orientation Fil, "Battle of Russia" was shown on this base at the end of this month.

RECREATION AND WELFARE

1. Special Services.

Two shows were presented during the month. The "Flying Yanks" gave two concerts of dance music in the Aero Club on 22 January to audiences totaling 800. On 30 January the USO show, "Bandwagon" gave two performances in the Aero Club theater to another 1000 men. The following night a CEMA concert of high caliber was given for the enjoyment of about fifty enlisted men and visitors. The Glee Club, still a very young organization progressed during the month.

The year of "Danse" was initiated by the New Year's Eve Ball at the Officers Club. Dances at the Aero Club fell this month on the nights of January 5, 12, 19 and 26. Thursday, 18 January was the date of the January NCO club dance.

The Base Basketball League was in full swing with keen competition among the eleven teams participating. In the Division League the Officers team was tied for first place. The enlisted men's team broke even with two wins and two losses. In the Peterborough Red Cross League our base team tied for second place.

The 15 USAFI enrollments were rather evenly divided between mathematics and business subjects. This indicates a trend toward small business lines and preparation for engineering colleges. Two medical officers availed themselves of the opportunity to attend a week's medical course at the University of Birmingham. "The Battle of Russia" an orientation film was shown to 2640 officers and enlisted men on the Station within a period of three days. Army Talks reached 1200 men per week. The library has 300 books, exclusively technical and instructional, which will be available soon. They are now in the process of being cataloged. A vocational kit has been received containing pamphlets describing the advantages and disadvantages of about 75 job categories.

The Aero Club continues to play its important part in the life of the Station. In addition to its double role of USO theater and Ball Room, it has provided gymnasium facilities both for basketball and other sports. Discussions led by S-2 officers elicited considerable interest. The library was used rather extensively. The fires in the Club attracted many men who read, wrote and played small games during the evenings. Interest during the month turned to bridge.

The movies we have been having on Sunday nights have gone over better than anything we have tried in a long time. There is no movie on the base on this night. The tables and chairs in the snack bar are left arranged as usual. The men begin to come in right after chow and sit around eating and talking until eight o'clock. At that time the movie is shown at one end of the snack bar, and the men can sit at their tables and watch it. They seem to enjoy the luxury of being able to eat and watch the movie at the same time.

One Sunday afternoon Eleanor Seiber, from a nearby service club, and Sgt. Snyder, who was formerly with Ted Fiorita's orchestra, teamed up and gave us a duo piano concert that was really a treat. Our next ambition is to have three people on three pianos. Eleanor and Snyder say they are game if we can find a third.

Major Walters, our executive officer, has made quite a name for himself as a checkers player. But so has Sgt. Cox. The two became anxious to test their prowess against each other, and a game was scheduled to be played in the lounge of the Aero Club. There was much excitement, and our Coxey came out with top honors. The men enjoyed it so that two of the G.I.'s have challenged two of the officers to a bridge tournament next.

Colonel Harris E. Rogner

Colonel Harris E. Rogner, Commanding Officer of this bomb group, has been awarded a second Oak Leaf Cluster to his Distinguished Flying Cross.

He was decorated for a series of brilliantly commanded air assaults against the enemy's strategic industrial centers, as well as bombing the enemy's communications and transport lines.

As our ground forces pushed the German back to the Siegfried Line, the Eighth Air Force was dispatching its Fortresses to destroy bridges and marshalling yards, which were of great value to the retreating Nazi. Colonel Rogner led his combat wing against a railroad bridge in Belgium, over which passed the equipment and men that were steadily reenforcing the German Army. The bridge was heavily defended by batteries of anti-aircraft guns, but Colonel Rogner attacked his target with excellent results. About a month later he was again leading one of the Eighth's huge air armadas, this time against the highly important German railroad center of Munster, through which passed tremendous quantities of Nazi war material and troop trains. Upon approaching the target, Colonel Rogner found two great obstacles confronting him. One was bad weather and the other intense enemy anti-aircraft fire. He changed his course and neared the target area from a new direction, which offered more visibility. His bombardier was able to see his aiming point and in a matter of moments bombs were away. Enemy flak and bad weather had failed to stop the air assault and the target was hit. Excellent results were obtained. The high degree of success achieved by Colonel Rogner on these occasions is attributable to his superior airmanship and leadership.

Captain George Cahelo, Jr.

Captain George Cahelo, Jr. has been decorated with a second Oak Leaf Cluster to his Distinguished Flying Cross, it was recently announced by the commanding general, Eighth Air Force.

In the autumn of 1944, the Eighth Air Force was delivering its huge daylight precision bombing assaults against the Nazi oil centers, with unprecedented fury. Politz was one of the enemy's largest oil cities. It is situated near the old German-Polish frontier and is protected from air assault by hundreds of anti-aircraft guns and fighter planes. But it was high on the priority list of targets for the Eighth Air Force to bomb. The 457th Group was dispatched to attack this target along with the rest of the Eighth. Capt. Cahelo is the lead bombardier, and it was on his computations and planning that the other Forts in the group released their bombs. He was flying in the lead aircraft and as the giant air armada approached Politz the anti-aircraft batteries below commenced their terrific barrage. The sky was full of puffs of exploding shells, and soon exploding and burning bombers filled much of the sky. Still the Forts pushed on, a direct hit killed the pilot of Captain Cahelo's plane just as he was starting on the all important bombing-run. The co-pilot held the plane on her course as Cahelo prepared to drop his bombs. But the Germans had covered most of the city with a smoke screen. The aiming point which Captain Cahelo was to use became obscured. He then chose another point, quickly calculated and checked his bombsight, and in a few moments he let his bombs go. His aim was true, and below the huge oil plants and warehouses that were full of oil were now blazing. Cahelo then climbed up into the pilot's seat and assisted the co-pilot in flying the Fort back to its base.

The bombing assault on Politz was part of the Eighth Air Force's daylight bombing offensive against the Reich's oil centers that were supplying the Germans' mechanized divisions and the rapidly dwindling Luftwaffe.

Thus far in his combat career, Captain Cahelo has been decorated with the Distinguished Flying Cross and two Oak Leaf Clusters and the Air Medal with three Oak Leaf Clusters.

Prior to his entry into the Army Air Forces, in 1941, Captain Cahelo was a student, at Mt. Hermon College, Mass.

1st Lt. Clarence R. Jennings

1st Lt. Clarence R. Jennings has been decorated with the Distinguished Flying Cross, it was recently announced by the commanding general, Eighth Air Force.

Lt. Jennings was the pilot of a B-17 Flying Fortress, with the 457th Heavy Bombardment Group. When the Eighth Air Force was carrying out its huge daylight precision bombing assaults against the Reich's oil centers, this group along with the rest of the Eighth attacked one of the most important oil cities in Nazi Europe. Lt. Jennings was piloting a Fortress in this huge air armada that was out to destroy one of the main sources of oil for the German war machine. As Jenning's bomber commenced its bombing run, the enemy opened up with a terrific anti-aircraft barrage, Jenning's aircraft received several direct hits, but he could not attempt any evasive action, as his bombardier was preparing to bomb. Still more hits were sustained, and after the bombs were released the already crippled bomber was the object of many more hits. The windshield was shattered, two of the engines were completely destroyed and a third engine badly damaged, all four fuel tanks were punctured, the oxygen and hydraulic systems were partially destroyed. The ailerons were ripped and the catwalk in the bomb bay was severed. The main spars on each wing were partly shot away, most of the instruments were destroyed and the radio was inoperative. Lt. Jennings skillfully controlled his bomber, in spite of the fact that it was virtually shot to pieces. Realizing that the plane did not have enough fuel to make the return flight to England, and that any long flight would probably cause what was left of the crippled bomber to fall apart, Lt. Jennings took up a heading for Sweden. As a result of the enemy's anti-aircraft fire, the Fortress was not the only thing that suffered, the bombardier, was killed by flak fragments, shortly after he released his bombs, and the observer was badly wounded. Upon reaching an airfield in Sweden, Lt. Jennings was again confronted with a serious problem. His brakes were shot out and the landing flaps were inoperative. Displaying rare skill and technique, Lt. Jennings managed to land his plane without further mishap. Unfortunately this epic air drama didn't end with the successful landing of the Fort. A few hours later, Captain Cox the observer from the S-2 Section of the group, died of his wounds. Lt. Jennings displayed great courage, coolness and skill throughout his hazardous flight and his actions reflect the highest credit upon himself and the Armed Forces of the United States.

Thus far in his military career, Lt. Jennings has been decorated with the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Air Medal and three Oak Leaf Clusters.

Prior to his entry into the Army Air Forces, in 1943, Lt. Jennings was employed as a carpenter by the U. S. Army Engineers, in Alaska. He has recently returned to the Zone of the Interior.

The attention of this Headquarters has recently been called to the extremely large number of reports received from Military Police in London because officers and enlisted personnel fail to comply with instructions regarding their identification. This applies alike to identification cards and identification tags.

2. It is desired that the attention of all personnel of your command be called to the necessity for compliance with Par 44, AR 600-40 and ETOUSA Cir 78, dated 26 Sep 1943.

3. In a number of cases U.S. personnel have lost their lives in the U.K. because their identification tags were not worn round the neck and considerable time has been lost in determining the blood type for transfusion. In a number of cases transfusion could not be given for that reason."

4. A considerable number of U.S. personnel have deserted and remained in the United Kingdom supporting themselves by thieving and by using the identities of others. Identification papers and tags have been carelessly left in Red Cross Clubs and hostels where they can be easily picked up. In one case a deserter was apprehended in the act of stealing the travel order of a soldier who was enroute to the United States and whose AGO card and identification tags were already in his possession.

5. It is felt by this Headquarters that many personnel do not realize the necessity for the present regulations on the subject and that if it is called to their attention the current problem will be considerably reduced.

6. Military Police, both on the stations and in the areas, will make frequent checks to see that all identification is properly worn or carried."

YOU HAVE A RIGHT TO BE PROUD

Three years ago the 28th of this Month, the War Department activated the 8th Air Force and assigned it to the European Theatre of Operations for the express purpose of dealing knock-out blows to Nazi dominated Europe. Before that task could be carried out efficiently and effectively, Combat crews and Ground crews had to be trained and disciplined to undergo the hardships of War, to understand the all important part they would have to play in order to force the well trained Nazi Armies from the fields of France, to carry on in the face of overwhelming obstacles of supply and materiel and the training of each Air-crew and Ground-crew member to do his job efficiently. These problems were overcome with a minimum of delay and the 8th Air Force began to perform the duties of its assigned task a few months after its date of activation.

In the early stages of the 457th Bomb Group, the same problems of training and discipline of troops had to be dealt with quickly and correctly in order to cope with the Nazi War Machine. The 457th Bomb Group was destined to become a part of the ever growing 8th Air Force that was attaining, through its accomplishments, recognition from other Air Forces and the Civilian population at home. It was then and is now our responsibility to uphold the recognition we have inherited by our assignment to the 8th Air Force. That recognition we have upheld and will continue to uphold until the Nazis crumble and fade away in terms of unconditional surrender. We as a Bombardment Group have gained the distinction of having the best bombing record of any unit in this Air Force. Through hard work on the part of every member of this command, we have met the challenge and gained that distinction of which we are proud.

You as a member of this Group, as a member of this Division and as a member of the 8th Air Force have a right to be proud. The record established is proof of the tasks accomplished and of those which we have before us.

Let us not slacken our efforts in foolish fancy of pride by taking an over dose of conceit; but re-double our efforts, spend more time on the job, and build up a bombing record for this organization that will continue to lead the 8th Air Force and defeat the radical German Armies whose goal was to rule the world.

'You, Soldier, are a member of an outstanding team. You have a right to be proud.

IT'S YOUR AIR FORCE - BE PROUD OF IT

The EIGHTH AIR FORCE - the GREATEST Air Force in the world - YOUR Air Force - the Air Force that has as its supreme objective the destruction of the German war machine and the German will to fight was established 28 January 1942.

In its first mission against the enemy in Occupied France on 17 August 1942, the striking force consisted of twelve B-17s. In the intervening months, the Eighth has achieved the size demanded for its tasks; and on Christmas Eve 1944 OUR Air Force put up more than 2,000 planes over the Reich.

The story of air progress and mass attacks has been made possible only by the cooperation, coordination and collaboration of all units and personnel under Lieutenant General DOOLITTLE'S command. Continued success in breaking down enemy resistance is inevitable as long as each and every soldier does his job to the best of his ability. The record of the Eighth Air Force will go down in the annals of history to be reviewed by future generations. You can well take pride in the fact that you are an important spoke in that mighty wheel which is rolling its way to Victory.

"A" Day for the Eighth, on 28 Jan 45, marks the third birthday of the Eighth Air Force, now a mature organization in aerial combat. Our combined efforts have hit the enemy in his vital spots of industry, oil and manufacturing centers. Our continued combined efforts will gain the ultimate victory as we bomb our way to an unconditional surrender and the long-awaited V-Day.
